Andrew Huebner

Andrew Huebner currently is an M.A. student and Teaching Assistant at the University of North Texas in Denton, Texas. Andrew earned his Bachelor's of Arts in History (2016) with a minor in English from Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas.

Andrew currently is working on his master's thesis, titled "Famine Fighters: AEF Veterans and the 1921 Russian Famine." The thesis examines the murky relationship between the American Relief Administration and the U.S. military after the First World War from 1919-1923. The study examines how prior-service and active duty military veterans influenced U.S. humanitarianism and foreign policy by using the 1921 Russian famine relief mission as a case study. His committee consists of Dr. Olga Velikanova (chair), Dr. Geoffrey Wawro, and Dr. Graham Cox. Andrew's research interests also includes Russia in the First and Second World Wars and the ancient Roman Republic.

Andrew has published with the Army University Press (AUP) as a part of their case study book set on Large Scale Combat Operations (LSCO). Additionally, he has presented at several conferences including a special focus conference hosted by the Centre for War Studies at the University College of Dublin. He is a member of the Phi Alpha Theta history honor society and the Society of Military History.

Andrew is originally from Brazoria, Texas. His favorite hobbies include archaeology, drawing, writing, and playing board games. He is a board member of the Texas Military Historical Society and also regularly volunteers at the Museum of the American G.I. in College Station, Texas.
