

Alfred C. Mierzejewski

Alfred C. Mierzejewski is Professor of History at UNT. He received his BA in modern German history from Southeastern Massachusetts University and his advanced degrees, also in German history, from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. At UNT, he teaches courses on modern German history. He has published a book on the strategic bombing of Germany during World War II, two volumes on the history of the German National Railway and a biography of Ludwig Erhard. He has also published numerous articles on various aspects of German economic history. He is currently working on a history of the German government retirement pension system. He is interested in modern German economic and business history, transportation, especially railways and aviation, and economic theory.

