

Matt Stampher is a Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Air Force serving as a School of Advanced Air and Space Studies (SAASS) Fellow at the University of North Texas. He specializes in Ancient History and is studying under Dr. Fuhrmann.

Lt. Col Stampher is a Senior Pilot and has logged over 2,900 flight hours, including over 600 combat hours, in RQ-4 and C-17 aircraft. He has served in Operations Enduring Freedom, Iraqi Freedom, and New Dawn. Additionally, he has served as the Director of Operations for RQ-4 Global Hawk operations in the Pacific Theater.

A graduate of the United States Air Force Academy, Lt Col Stampher additionally has a Master of Arts in Economics from the University of Oklahoma, as well as a Master of Science in Airpower Strategy and Technology Integration and a Master of Philosophy in Military Strategy from Air University. He has been selected to join the faculty of the School for Advanced Air and Space Studies following his PhD Fellowship.

Matt
Stampher

